Future of Print & USB Formats

- USP43-NF38 will be the last edition that has a print or flash drive (USB) format
 - There will be no print or USB formats for the Supplements to USP43-NF38
 - All current print and USB customers transitioning over to the online platform
 - Created “Referencing Guideline” along with FAQs
- Access to Archive content; planned future archive subscription

Guideline for Referencing USP-NF Documentary Standards

Introduction:

In the new USP-NF Online platform, USP is introducing a document-centric model for the version control and presentation of our documentary standards. Whether a document is official or not official will no longer be linked to when a specific publication such as the main USP-NF edition or one of the Supplements becomes official, but instead will be based on the individual document.

This leads to the question of how to reference the currently official documentary standard when you are using the new USP-NF Online platform. USP has created this guideline to help your organization transition to referencing documentary standards within the new platform.

Background:

Many organizations reference the USP-NF edition along with a page number as an indication that the method or specification listed is or was official at the time of testing, filing, or release (e.g. USP41-NF36 1S page 8428 indicating an official date of August 1, 2018).
